Class Day PROGRAM

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

by Theodore B. Wynne

As President of the graduating class of 1954, it is my honor and privilege to extend our most sincere and gracious words of welcome to the many parents, teachers, and friends who are assembled here to witness our Class Day exercises.

The guidance, encouragement, and patience of the faculty have been invaluable to our success both as individuals and as a class. Mr. Fenner, in particular, has endeared himself to the hearts of all, and many of us would not be where we are today, were it not for his gentle understanding and advice.

Our program, we trust, will be most interesting. The excellence of our Class Day speakers and musicians will suggest the degree of achievement we have attained. We know you will listen with interest and we hope you will share our gratitude toward all who have been instrumental in helping us complete four of the best years of our lives at Classical High School.

HISTORY

CLASS OF 1954

by Judith A. Chasen, Historian

The month was September; the year 1950. Five short years had passed and the peace which had been ours was gone again. We were at war, and sadly we watched our boys leave their youth and homes behind to fight for an ideal.

We on the other side of the world were making a transition, too. "The Class of 1954" was what the man had called us. We received some final admonitions not to wait for the elevator and started up the stairs. Our history began.

The first school event to draw our timid interest was the Varsity-Faculty game, where Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer was Mr. Butler and the Mad Russian, Mr. Gervais. December gave us Jack Berg in his immortal role of Bob Cratchit at our first Festival of Lights; February, Mary Kay Sinnott at the piano and Nancy Savat at the flute in the concert; and April, the baseball nine with a Freshman, named Bernard McKernan, playing second base. Our bid to fame reached out into the scholastic field as the names of Marilyn Reidy, Dianne Condon, Nancy Dwyer, Carol Cannon, and Sandra Willson were at the top of the "E" list.

A year had passed—September 1951. They had told us it was only police action, but the cessation of hostilities in Korea did not loom as probable in the near future. With heavy hearts we turned away from world events and concentrated on our sophomore year.

Mr. McKinley called us "wise fools" and we immediately set out to prove it. Mr. Powers dealt the first blow to our inflated dignity when he requested us to take up our trusted tape measures and learn the dimensions of Classical High. The prize "pros" of "Flee" Hudson's Hockey team had insult added to injury when they reported to Miss Whitin who, determining to make men—or at least women—from these late additions, had them chasing the white pellets up and down the Athletic Field.

Those of us who studied biology in Room 33 will remember the live snake that escaped from Mr. Weed's collection of pets and scurried across the hall. Poor Miss Helen Kennedy! When our scaled friend slivered into her room, we thought the shock would cause a catastrophe.

Donning flaming argyles and white "bucks", we became "part of the crowd" and joined the school's clubs. Ann Kelly and Sandra Willson were the new members of the Argus board. One day they would be its editors. The Debating Society and the re-organized Agassiz Club made appearances on the horizon, and Tom Sabin became the first president of the latter. Remember our trip to the Biological Foundation? Ruth Hodes and a certain Miss X missed the bus! A few weeks later under the leadership of Mr. Tisdell, we boarded a bus for Mr. Weed's farm. While a group of us were getting lost between the lake and the alfalfa fields, Tom McGowan gathered up enough courage to crawl under a supposedly electrified fence and made friends with a little black lamb. Covered with mud, we started for home almost to lose Tom at a roadside stand that specialized in frozen custard.

Our honor was restored in the Variety Show by the dancing talents of Carolyn Sarosick, Elaine Epstein, and Roberta Maki; while scholastic honors went to Jeanne Heon, Beverly Israel, Elaine Garabedian, and Susanne Salomon, who added their names to the "E" list.

The year was 1952. A general had been replaced in Korea. We civilians expounded our theories on what should have been done and turned anxious eyes to the field of battle. Fervently we prayed for peace, and then we forgot the world for a moment to do our best to act out the roles of upper classmen.

Now we were seasoned veterans, and it was the first for many things. Ann Coghlin was the first vice-president of the newly formed Girls' Varsity Club, which boasted of Classical's finest women athletes. We had our first election and Ted Wynne was our first president; Ann Kelly, vice-president; Ann Coghlin, secretary; and Bernard McKernan, our treasurer. Spurred on by their leadership and Harold Marcus's unforgettable words, "Do you have a date yet? The dance is only four months away", we made our Junior Prom the highlight of the year with Mr. Daly dancing with those "lucky" junior girls. Honors were ours as the Choralettes went to Springfield for the All-State Chorus, Ted won the Harvard Book Prize, Catherine Herlihy won the Aletheia Club Award, and Mary Sinnott, Jacqueline Taft, Burton Mindick, and Barbara Wilensky became Horace Mann students. It was that year that Bob Paige began shouldering his way across the football field to fame. We formed a chorus around him and sang, "I'll Never Stand in Your Way".

Nor can we forget that Variety Show. Judy Cotton and Nancy Dwyer kept us laughing as they sang "Doing What Comes Naturally" complete, or shall we say incomplete, with costume. Bob Goldsmith immortalized Big Steve who, "Somewhere, sometime, somehow, would be someone, somewhere, sometime, somehow", and whose life became a part of ours for six months to come.

June 1953. The year was coming to a successful close. We had a new President who promised us peace and we felt secure in our hope. Then, on June ninth, came the tragedy. Whenever we think of that terrible tornado, however, we have to think of the scores of our classmates who unhesitantly stretched out their hands and hearts to help wherever they could. Marsha Shulman and Glory Kramer worked at the Red Cross; Phyllis Greene and Rachael Seder worked at the hospitals; Harold Marcus, Tom Sabin, Ted Wynne, Stuart Smith, and Jack Berg were in the disaster areas; while John Fitzpatrick and Tony Navickas were with the National Guard. We had reason to be proud.

WILL

by John H. Berg

We, the Class of 1954, being of sound mind and body, do hereby take typewriter in hand to set down our last will and testament. We make the following generous bequests:

To Classical, the hope that our future achievements may reflect approvingly upon her efforts.

To Mr. McKinley, a police dog to help him patrol his beat on the first floor.

To Mr. Couming, a lie detector to check the stories of the people who arrive at 8:15 every morning.

To Mr. Weed, a bottle of air-wick for his biology lab. No explanation needed.

To Mr. Powers, a pamphlet to be distributed to all his classes entitled, "The Crime and Punishment of Gum-Chewers."

To Mr. Daly, all the success in the world in his new work as secretary to the Mayor.

To Miss Gilbert, a Sophomore class just bursting with dramatic ability.

To Mr. Johnstone, a length of chain to keep the people who procure basement slips from disappearing permanently.

To Mr. Butler, a complete set of "Classic Comics" so that he will be able to keep a total check on all of his English classes.

To Mr. Hearn, a large, golden test tube in memory of all those that were broken this past year.

In addition to the above gifts, I will make mention of the following personal endowments:

To all future Classical athletes needing transportation, a slightly used Model "A" belonging to one "generous" Neil Heffernan.

To Debbie Johnson, Ann Kelly's position as head of Classical's Lovers' Bureau.

To any young car owner with a fuel problem, Bill Leahy's secret formula: turpentine, rubbing alcohol, and aspirin.

Bill Riley leaves—Sue Boyle looks forward to a monotonous future.

To some undernourished young Junior, Pete Levenson's and Sam Martin's barbells and the book entitled "Why Tuba Players Need a Strong Set of Muscles."

To any loquacious Junior lady, Judy Chasen leaves her oratorical ability and one loudspeaker to be used in that order.

David Sanger leaves . . . his sister, Diana.

To Bernie McLean and Frannie McNamara, the scholastic record of Cay Herlihy, Sandy Willson, Elaine Garabedian, and Elwood Ede, to show that it can be done.

To some future Classical comedienne, Jo-Ann Carron, Nancy Dwyer and Judy Cotton leave their wit, anecdotes, and personality, respectively.

To Cliff Thayer and Bill Jenkins, Larry Riordan and Dick Paduch leave their indomitable ability to stay out of trouble.

Ann Coghlin leaves — all homeroom teachers may rest in peace.

To the school library, the best seller written by Dave Dick and Jack Keenan, "Going Steady in High School or How to be Sure of Having a Date for Every Dance."

To the biology department, Tom Sabin leaves his body, so that some lucky underclassman will have the chance that he never had.

To some hungry Junior, Fred Baron leaves his delicatessen which is found in the fourth desk in the fourth row in Room 18.

To the future class treasurers, Jim Christo leaves his new green Cadillac convertible.

To future dance committees, Harold Marcus leaves 10 rolls of green streamers, 15 rolls of white streamers, 1 ball of twine, 3 thumb tacks, and 2 slightly damaged balloons.

To any aspiring Sophomore cowboy, Carol (Tex) Cannon leaves her sixshooter and Bill (Durango) McGrail leaves his leather jacket.

Granger Norwood leaves his tuba to any Junior who is willing to play and able to carry the monster.

To any Junior girl who wants to help her fellow men, is left a copy of the book "Practical Forgery" by Loretta Lemay, who shall remain anonymous.

Bernie McKernan leaves the memories of his parties to those who are able to remember.

To some fortunate Sophomore boy, Alex "Casanova" Drapos leaves his way with the fair sex . . . and one large stick to be used in that order.

To the Sophomores we leave faith; to the Juniors we leave hope; the Seniors will accept all charity. Thank you.

To the custodians, we leave a huge, mechanical waste paper basket with twenty arms, to collect stray papers thrown about by prospective basketball players.

To Mr. Fenner and to our faculty, we leave our heartfelt gratitude for their unquenchable enthusiasm in preparing us to advance into our future.

To this last will and testament of the class of 1954, I set my hand and seal on this twenty-first day of June, in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and fifty-four.

ORATION

CLASS OF 1954

by Thomas D. Sabin

What would an all-out war fought with hydrogen bombs mean? It would mean the obliteration of all large cities and probably of many smaller ones, and the killing of most of their inhabitants. After such a war, nothing that resembled present civilization would remain. The fight for mere survival would dominate everything. The destruction of the cities might set technology back a hundred years or more. In a generation even the knowledge of technology and science might disappear, because there would be no opportunity to practice them. Indeed it is likely that technology and science, having brought such utter misery upon man, would be suspected as the works of the devil, and that a new Dark Ages would begin on earth.

We know what physical destruction does to the moral values of people. We have seen how many Germans, already demoralized by the Nazis, lost all sense of morality when, during and after the war, the bare necessities of life, food, clothing, and shelter were lacking. Democracy and human decency were empty words; there was no reserve strength left for such luxuries. If we have learned anything from the aftermath of World War II, it is that physical destruction brings moral destruction.

We have also learned that prosperity is the best defense against communism and dictatorship and because of this knowledge, we have poured billions of dollars into Western Europe in order to restore her economy. This generosity has won more friends than anything else we have done. But after the next war, if it were fought with atomic and hydrogen bombs, our own country would be as grievously destroyed as Europe and the USSR, and we could no longer afford such generosity. It would be everyone for himself, and everyone against the other.

It is ironical that the United States of all countries should lead in the development of such methods of warfare. The military methods adopted by this nation at the outset of World War II aimed at conserving as many lives as possible. The hydrogen bomb carries mechanical warfare to absurdity in that it defeats its own aim. Instead of saving lives, it takes many more lives; for every soldier killed on the battlefield, many non-combatant civilians would be killed. Surely it is time for us to examine our intentions.

One may well ask: Why advance such arguments with reference to the H-Bomb and not atomic bombs in general? Is the atomic bomb moral and the hydrogen bomb immoral? If so, where is the dividing line? We must remember that there has been much objection to using the atomic bomb in the recent Korean conflict and that after the joy of victory at the close of World War II had quieted down, there was a deep feeling that the use of the A-bomb in Japan was a mistake. It was this feeling that was a prime reason for the offers of international control of the A-bomb. We know that these negotiations have not led to complete success as yet. But our inability to eliminate the atomic bomb is no reason to introduce a bomb which is a thousand times worse.

The decision to proceed with development of the H-bomb has been made. The one reason that justifies this decision is this: to deter the Russians from using it against us, if only from fear of retaliation. Our possession of the H-bomb would put us in a better position if Russia should present us with an ultimatum based on their possession of it. In other words, the one purpose of our development of the bomb would be to prevent its use, not to use it.

If this is our reason, we can contribute much to the peace of the world by stating this reason openly. This could be done in a formal declaration stating that the U. S. would never be first to use the bomb, and that we would employ the weapon only if it were used against us or one of our allies.

We must not under any circumstances be the first to use such a horrible weapon. We believe in peace based on mutual trust. Shall we achieve this aim by using hydrogen bombs?

With the end of the summer and our vacation came the long-awaited armistice. Our soldiers were coming home, and we were coming back to Classical High as Seniors.

Hastily taking stock, Neil Heffernan decided not to study as hard and spend more time with his Model A, while Catherine Herlihy resolved to stop wasting time. It was not long before all resolutions were broken and we had decided that it was more in keeping with tradition to have the best time possible in our last year of high school. It was the year of American History, modern jazz, Virgil, knee socks, chemistry problems, and "Dragnet". Remember Harold Marcus's black and yellow sport jacket, Ted's bright red shirt? The days of conservative dressing were over.

Business came first, however, and elections were held. Ted, Ann Kelly, and Ann Coghlin were re-elected, while Jim Christo bought a brown notebook and developed a very insistent nature. The chase was on! There was more voting, too, as we sacrificed a precious study period to gather in the assembly hall to elect Tom Sabin our orator; Jackie, testator; Mary Kay and Stuart, marshalls; and yours truly, historian. Then one day Mr. Fenner summoned us to his office; Elaine Garabedian, Jeanne Heon, Beverly Israel, and me, to tell us we were to speak at graduation. The proposition was a little frightening, but we were mighty proud.

Senior year meant more gray hairs for Mr. Coakley as we rushed in hordes to take driving lessons. Helen Contis almost drove the car over a cliff, while Joan Adamski tried to start in third gear. Wonder upon wonder, the car did move; rather jerkily, but it moved. It was a long hard battle, but not even a registry man can out-talk a Classical Senior. We got our licenses.

The first social event of the season was our very successful Senior Hop, where Jacqueline Dunton picked the lucky number and became queen, where Granger, Ted, Nancy Dwyer, and Jack Berg re-enacted "St. George and the Dragonet". In the meantime Larry Riordan and Bill Riley made City All-Stars, while Mary-Ellen Comstock led her battling Amazons to the field hockey City Championship. That year also, we had a few Senior boys who flung caution to the winds and joined the bread lines at the Bethel Mission. A prize for the most, well, you use your imagination, should be theirs.

One of the high spots of the most fabulous year of them all was the February Variety Show directed by Jack Berg, and emceed by Bob Goldsmith. Who can forget Judy Cotton and Nancy Dwyer as they sang "Temptation", Arnalee Haberman's rendition of "Stranger in Paradise", Jack, Bob and Granger as they warned us to "Brush up on your Shakespeare", Granger Norwood and the tuba, or Ann Kelly and Jo-Ann Carron as they told us, "You Can't Get a Man With a Gun"?

And so we have come to an end and a beginning. The month is June, the year 1954. We have lasted through "Macbeth", A. C. E. tests, College Boards, and we are ready to go forward. To go forth with courage is now required of us, courage always to retain the hope and the faith we had as freshmen, the hope and the faith that is ours now and will guide us in years to come.
